A Note on Accuracy

Every effort has been made to present historical events with faithfulness to classical Islamic sources, references to which are provided throughout the text for the reader's verification. This work is not intended as an academic study or scholarly research; it is a narrative retelling — written to make the lives of the Companions of the Prophet Muhammad (ﷺ) accessible, engaging, and an inspiring gateway for those who wish to explore this history further.

After spending years under the influence of people like Samar, and other members of Intellectual Believers, (a Sindhi Dawah local/digital platform) I came to the conclusion that young Muslims are highly influenced by their celebrities and unfortunately, the Islamic figures are presented as something abstract and supernatural, or at the very least beyond human. My personal solution is that in the modern competition of who can influence better, we should introduce our beloved Sahaba as the Heros of our younger generation.

This book is also an attempt for that to show how legendary As-Siddique was and to bring our youth a step closer to going through books rather being influenced by someone who may or may not be credible.

Every Muslim who has received the knowledge of Islam must forward it to their brothers and sisters. This book is my attempt to forward that knowledge and an act of Dawah towards our fellow Muslims.

The Legend of As-Siddique would not have been possible without my companions of Intellectual Believers who supported and helped me unconditionally on the journey towards Islam.

I have come to believe that a Muslim, as soon as they are on the path towards Islam, must seek like-minded brothers or sisters and join together to seek Allah's guidance like the Sahaba of Rasool Allah (ﷺ).

A Muslim also must turn to books before anything else, the moment they set foot on the path of Islam. Videos and podcasts are fine but as the source of information, books always come with references to authentic literature and are without any emotional dopamine hit.

The key message of this book which I am about to deliver to you is that: The Sahaba took it upon themselves to learn and put actions to defend and expand Islam, if your Deen takes you away from politics, then your Deen is not Islam. Because the Sunnah of Prophet Muhammad (ﷺ) and what followed by his Sahaba is to become the best at what you do, and lead.

This book is aimed to be the first domino in making the reader comfortable with Islamic content, letting the reader experience the beautiful heroic legacy of the Sahaba and inspiring them to go through their own journey of Islam. Insha'Allah this book will be useful for you

The Beginning of the End

12th of Rabi al-Awwal, 11 AH | Monday, June 8, 632 CE,

— `Auf bin Mali (R.A.)

I went to the Prophet (ﷺ) during the Ghazwa of Tabuk while he was sitting in a leather tent. He said, "Count six signs that indicate the approach of the Hour: my death, the conquest of Jerusalem, a plague that will afflict you (and kill you in great numbers) as the plague that afflicts sheep, the increase of wealth to such an extent that even if one is given one hundred Dinars, he will not be satisfied; then an affliction which no Arab house will escape, and then a truce between you and Bani Al-Asfar (i.e. the Byzantines) who will betray you and attack you under eighty flags. Under each flag will be twelve thousand soldiers.

Bukhari 3176

A B U B A K R came near his horse. He climbed its back and rode towards Masjid Al-Nabi.

He went through the gates. Inside were all the Sahaba — the best of the best, now grieving. Some, like Uthman, couldn't find the ability to speak. People couldn't stand, their feet had gone numb. The air was as though the Day of Resurrection had fallen upon Al-Madinah.

Abu Bakr didn't say a word. He walked towards his daughter's house, which was almost a part of the Masjid. He went in and found the greatest figure to ever walk on Earth lying in a white garment.

Abu Bakr removed the garment from the face, and there was Muhammad (ﷺ) sleeping peacefully.

The Companion couldn't hold himself. Tears began to fall as he wept over his friend, his leader, his Prophet and Messenger of Allah (ﷺ).

Barely a week ago, the Rasool Allah (ﷺ) had given a speech upon the Minbar of the Masjid:

"Allah has given a slave the option to choose this world or what is with Him. The slave has chosen what is with Allah."

Nobody seemed to understand. Not a single Sahaba moved as though anything shocking had been revealed. But Abu Bakr couldn't hold himself. He wept. The Sahaba were confused — what did Abu Bakr know that they did not?

He knew the slave the Messenger of Allah (ﷺ) spoke of was none other than the Prophet Muhammad (ﷺ) himself.

And Muhammad (ﷺ) had chosen what is with Allah...

Abu Bakr looked at the Messenger (ﷺ) sleeping peacefully before him. He kissed the Messenger's (ﷺ) face and said, "Let my father and mother be sacrificed for you. Wallahi, Allah will never cause you to die twice. As for the death which was written for you — it has come upon you."

Meanwhile, Umar came near the Masjid. He heard what the Sahaba were saying about the Messenger (ﷺ).

Umar couldn't take it. He shouted, "He has not died! Rather he has gone to his Lord, just as Musa went, remaining absent from his people for forty nights, after which he returned to them. Wallahi, the Messenger of Allah (ﷺ) will indeed return to us, just as Musa returned, and he will cut off the hands and limbs of those men who claim he has gone!"

Abu Bakr came out and said, "Sit down, Ya Umar."

Umar refused.

Abu Bakr then addressed the Sahaba: "If anyone amongst you used to worship Muhammad, then Muhammad is dead. But if anyone of you used to worship Allah, then Allah is Alive and shall never die."

Then he recited from the Qur'an:

Muhammad is not but a messenger. Other messengers have passed on before him. So if he was to die or be killed, would you turn back on your heels to unbelief? And he who turns back on his heels will never harm Allah at all; but Allah will reward the grateful.

Al Imran 144

Umar's legs gave way and he fell to the ground. The verse made him realise that indeed, Muhammad (ﷺ) had completed his mission – and now it was the Ummah and the Qur'an.

Later that day, the Muhajreen sat with Abu Bakr. The group began discussing what came next. What would happen to the Ummah and the message of Islam now that Rasool Allah (ﷺ) had gone?

The matter of Caliphate arose. Who was worthy to become the successor of the Imam ul-Ambiya – the Leader of Prophets?

This was no ordinary decision. This was the decision of the First Caliph. The leader of the Ummah. The person who would carry the mantle Muhammad (ﷺ) had left behind.

Umar spoke up, "We must go to our brothers of the Ansar, for they have every right to help us in this decision."

So the Muhajreen went.

On their path they met two men of the Ansar. The Muhajreen asked what had been agreed upon.

The two men asked, "Where are you going?"

"We are going to our brothers of the Ansar," the Muhajreen replied.

The two told them that the Ansar had already made their decision – and now that they knew, they should not approach and overturn it.

Umar got furious. "Wallahi, we will go to them."

So the Muhajreen went to the courtyard of Sa'd ibn Ubayda – the Chief of Khazraj.

Upon entering, Umar noticed a man covered in garments. "Who is he?" he asked.

"Sa'd," the Ansar replied.

"What is wrong with him?"

"He is sick."

The Muhajreen sat down with them.

An Ansari spokesman stood and praised Allah, then addressed the gathering: "We are Allah's Ansar and the majority of the Muslim army, while you, the Muhajreen, are a small group – and some among you came with the intention of preventing us from this matter of Caliphate and depriving us of it."

Before Umar could rise, Abu Bakr held him back.

Abu Bakr stood up. After the words settled, he said, "Ya Ansar, you deserve all the qualities you have attributed to yourselves. But this matter of Caliphate belongs to the Quraish, for they are the best of the Arabs in lineage and homeland. I am pleased to suggest that you choose either of these two men and take the oath of allegiance to whichever you wish."

Abu Bakr then took the hand of Umar and the hand of Abu Ubayda.

Abu Ubayda quickly stood. "I would rather have my neck chopped off than become the ruler of a nation that counts Abu Bakr among its members."

Another Ansari rose. "I am a noble, recognised by my people. Let me choose one Caliph from among us, and one from among you."

Voices rose. People began to shout. There was no Muhammad (ﷺ) to silence them all with a single raised hand.

Umar looked around. This was madness. The Ummah stood on the edge of great fitnah.

Umar stepped in front of Abu Bakr and looked him in the eyes. "Give me your hand."

Abu Bakr extended his palm.

Umar took it and pledged bay'ah to Abu Bakr As-Siddique as the Caliph of the Ummah.

Silence fell. The Muhajreen looked at one another — then came forward, one by one, and pledged their allegiance on his hand.

Abu Bakr stood in awe.

Then came the Ansar. One by one, they took his hand and recognised him as the First Caliph of Islam.

Abu Bakr looked out at his people. Utter silence. He stepped forward and spoke.

"You know well that the Messenger of Allah (ﷺ) said: wherever the people travel through one valley and the Ansar travel through another — follow the Ansar."

The Ansar listened in silence.

Then Abu Bakr turned to Sa'd. "And you know, Ya Sa'd, what the Messenger of Allah (ﷺ) said while you sat and listened — that the Muhajreen are the leaders of this Caliphate."

He addressed them all. "The Messenger of Allah (ﷺ) said: the righteous follow the righteous, and the wicked follow the wicked."

Sa'd spoke. "You speak the truth. We are your ministers and you are our leaders."

Abu Bakr stood in the middle of the Sahaba. The Muhajreen behind him. The Ansar before him. All watching him — their leader, the Caliph of the Messenger of Allah (ﷺ).

Thus began the rise of the Caliphate.
